

Over the last four years there has been increased private sector participation in infrastructure via Public Private Partnerships (PPP), and as an objective but active participant in documenting this growth, Infrastructure Today established the Infrastructure Today Awards in collaboration with KPMG. It is our endeavour to applaud and recognise partners in the nation's growth through partnerships, a mode that has caught the fancy of the nation's policymakers, owners and developers.

The 4th edition of these awards will be held in a glittering ceremony in New Delhi on 9 December. Studied with topnotch attendees from the infrastructure sectors both from government and private sectors, the awards have increasingly been making their mark as an appreciation to reckon with.

4th KPMG Infrastructure Today Awards 2011

Specifically, the awards seek to promote wider recognition of success stories and identify and disseminate benchmarks and lessons on success drivers in PPP.

The methodology: More than 100 respondents filled out an online perception survey to vote for top organisations in each of the categories.

After short listing the top organisations excelling in PPP, the jury panel decided on the winner based on select evaluation criteria.

Members accorded weightage to

- Vision, scale and complexity of a project completed this year.
- Impact of the project on the society.
- Innovation.
